Network for Global Innovation

NGIN was conceived in 2013 as an initiative of the Los Angeles Cleantech Incubator (LACI) with the mission of interconnecting the world's leading clean technology innovation institutions to accelerate the adoption of sustainable technologies. LACI began as a start-up in a former bus repair garage in Los Angeles and within 6 years was ranked as one of the best incubators in the world, helped 120 startups raise over $228 million in funding, created over 2,000 jobs and over $625 million in long term economic value for the City. Fred Walti, the founding CEO of the Los Angeles Cleantech Incubator, launched NGIN with the aim of leveraging the experience he and his team had gained from creating LACI to assist and accelerate other cleantech ecosystems. NGIN has accelerated the expansion of start-up companies in more than a dozen global markets, attracted a range of innovative cleantech companies to the U.S. market, and assisted other institutions to build high performance ecosystems in countries as diverse as the United States to Ethiopia. In March 2018, NGIN was spun out of LACI as an independent organization under the leadership of LACI's co-founder and inaugural CEO Fred Walti. NGIN remains headquartered at the La Kretz Innovation Campus in Los Angeles, home to LACI.

Today, NGIN is a network of over 30 incubators, accelerators, technology parks, universities, cities, and NGOs in more than two dozen countries. NGIN is the primary implementation partner for UNIDO's Global Climate Innovation Program helping literally thousands of entrepreneurs get their products to market in developing nations including Ukraine, Morocco, Thailand, Pakistan, South Africa, and Kazakhstan.
